experience

2007 - present | Stolencow LLC | Owner

I am currently a freelance web designer who focuses primarily on building websites and banner ads for the video game industry.

2003 - 2007 | Sposto Interactive | Sr. Interactive Designer

I designed and built some of the more complex websites and flash projects as well as a bunch of promo / sweeps and a couple hundred banner campaigns for clients including Yahoo!, Yahoo! Hotjobs, Yahoo! Movies, Statefarm, Rodale, Lutron and Intelsat. I taught myself some Actionscript and also learned about branding and art direction and USP's and Big Ideas and many other agency type things.

2001 - 2003 | Sharp Innovations | Web Designer

I designed and built many, many websites (65?) and a few flash projects for small business type clients. I taught myself some HTML and Actionscript and also learned how to design and build an entire site in less than one week. I also learned how to integrate a site with PHP and how to work with programmers without having to redesign the site.

2000 - 2001 | R.R. Donnelley and Sons | Web Team

I worked on a team that converted printed financial documents into HTML. It was a macro intensive process that required attention to detail and the ability not to get bent out of shape in a quick turn around environment. I taught myself some Flash 5 in my downtime.

education

1996 - 1999 | Kutztown University | B.F.A. Printmaking

I graduated with honors from the Honors Program. I learned far too much about etching and drawing and painting and far too little about computers and web design. I fixed that with some after work home schooling.
